

Macrame

Introduction

This craft excels in producing ornaments and ornamental articles of domestic uses as well as articles of interior decoration. Chiefly practiced by tribal folk who produce Garlands, 'Dul', Bangles, wristlet, buttons, clip-pins, file-clips and numerous other articles of exquisite craftsmanship. This craft is predominant in Bolpur, and in Suri-I, and Rampurhat-I also. The products has high demand in different fairs in this district and in different parts of the country e.g. Delhi Haat, Bombay, Puri, etc. and it's a colourful feather of 'Santiniketan Mela' The word derives from the Turkish (or Persian or Arabic) for fringe. Macramé is knots; mostly half hitches and square knots. It was very popular in the sixties, and is back around. This time, chokers knotted from hemp twine and decorated with beads are a very big favorite. Hemp and linen are especially good for knotting; they are not too slippery to hold knots, or too skinny to manipulate.
